VINCENT MASON

Vincent Mason grew up outside Atlanta, soaking in the singer-songwriters his mom loved, Maroon 5, Jack Johnson, and early John Mayer, and carried that intimate, hook-heavy style with him into country music after discovering Parker McCollum in college. Dropping out to chase the dream, he honed his sound with hitmaker Jake Gear and a circle of top Nashville writers, shaping his 14-track debut There I Go, a thoughtful, bar-soaked, heart-bruised record built on big melodies and sharp storytelling.

Mason's played festivals like Stagecoach, Calf Fry, and Rock the South, toured with Riley Green, Parker McCollum, Jordan Davis, and Luke Bryan, and racked up streaming wins with "Hell Is a Dancefloor" (150M+, Gold), "Wish You Well" (21M+), and "Damned If I Do" (27M+). Next up, he hits the road for his headlining tour, There I Go, before joining one of his biggest influences, Morgan Wallen, on his Still The Problem Tour in 2026.
